

How to ensure your child becomes extremely successful in the future.

In this report you will see how a single mother got her son popular in school from being the “last” to be picked and how a cleaning lady used her cleaning skills to create a unique plan for her child.

“Children are the world’s most valuable resource and its best chance for the future.”

How most parents look after their kids

97% of parents react to instinct of parenthood. They help kids grow through buying food, clothing and provide a roof over their head. They also make sure kids get a good education to the best of their means. If they think they are falling behind, they get them tuition and extra help. To provide all of this, parents work very hard to make sure kids to not miss out on learning, entertainment and being loved. Do you fall into this category?

The story of Sarah

Sarah was a single parent to one son. She was a very dedicated and loving mother. Her focus was always about how she can make sure her son is happy.

One afternoon, her son, who was 7 at the time, came back home from school. She noticed that he was not himself. She asked him what’s wrong and he just reacted saying “nothing”. But she knew that there was an issue. She decided to let him be and gave him space. A couple of hours later he approached her slowly. “I hate school,” he said in a snappy tone. She was frozen with shock. The shock was not what he said, but more what she felt inside. His words triggered a very dark memory of hers. She remembered when she was picked on in school by other children. She could recall every moment as if it happened yesterday. She could remember all the names of the people who picked on her. All the sounds of kids laughing at her. She felt a deep dread. What if my son was going through the same thing? What if he is in the same pain as I was when I was a child. She slowly came to her senses and took a short breath. In a calm tone she asked, “Son why do you hate school?”

“No one wants to be my friend! When we play football, I’m the last to picked because I’m so rubbish! Even the football doesn’t like me because it never comes to me!”

She could notice the emotional hurt he was going through at the time. She could tell he was crying inside. This is the worst emotion to feel. When you are crying without tears. She knew this all too well. She wanted to embrace him and just tell him it would all be ok. But would it really be ok? This was a real turning point for her. All the hard work she was putting into her job meant nothing if he was not happy. For a second she wondered if she really failed as a parent. She took another small breath so she can respond calmly.

“Son, what would you like to do? How would you like to improve the situation?”

At this point tears started to run down his eyes.

“I want to be the one picked first in football,” He said in a slow shaky voice with his eyes looking down on the floor.

“How bad do you really want it,” asked Sarah

“I want it really bad.”

“What are you willing to do for it?”

He now looked up into Sarah’s eyes.”I am willing to do anything.”

Sarah approached her son and gave him a warm embrace.

The following day, after she dropped him off to school, she watched youtube videos about football skills and dribbling drills you can do in your own home. When her son came home she told him of a plan to create a football drill course in the back garden. He’s eyes beamed in excitement. They wasted no time and went to the local supermarket to buy some cones and a football.

Once they set everything up, her son started learning to practice dribbling. He failed miserably. Everytime he failed, she noticed his motivation getting lower and lower. This was a very bad decision. He threw his boots to the floor and ran upstairs. Sarah realised that she can’t teach him football without proper coaching. She ran into the living room and started searching for football coaches in the local area. The next day she met with different coaches and told them of the situation. After searching and searching she finally found a coach that is willing to take on the challenge. The fortunate thing was the summer holidays were just a few days away. As soon as the vacation started, the football coach started working with her son.

He started learning the fundamental basics of football and would do drills and patterns to improve. Even though her son was eager to move quickly, his coach would make sure he would take it easy and focus on the basics first. Soon, he understood the game and mastered the basics through constant practice and training. It was becoming second nature. At the same time, his confidence was dramatically increasing. There was an extra spring in his step. At the end of each training session, Sarah would encourage him to remember that he is committed to this and fully focused on being picked first. To never be last again.

The summer holidays flew by and it was time to go back into school. Sarah could see that there was a determination in her son's face. She could see he was waiting for this moment with real purpose.

The moment arrived. It was time for football again. All the kids knew who were the ones that would be picked first in the team and the ones that would be picked last. Yet again he was picked last. But this time something was different. He was not affected by it one single bit. He was calm.

He couldn't wait for the whistle to be blown. What was a few minutes seemed like hours to him. Finally the whistle was blown and the game started. All the kids he noticed were still not passing to him. About 10 minutes passed before he even touched the ball. Finally, the ball was loose without possession. He seized the opportunity and took control of the ball. As soon as he touched the ball, magic happened. He skipped past one, two, three players as if they weren't there. Some were so stunned that they just let him run past them. He was running as fast as the ball was traveling. When he got close to the goal, he connected perfectly and the ball flew into the top corner. The goalkeeper did not even have the time to dive. This one moment changed his entire school life. His team mates rushed towards him and congratulated him. Throughout the game, he became the main focal point in the team's attack. Right after the game he became hugely popular and was never picked last again.

"Parents are teachers, guides, leaders, protectors, and providers for their children."

Sarah deserves a gold medal in parenting. To take her son who was totally ignored and disliked and with a clear plan, change him to be one of the most popular kids in school is something that is truly phenomenal. There are many countless stories of parents who are gold medalists in parenting. They do what it takes to ensure their children are not picked last in many aspects.

Forseeing the struggles of your children in the future.

Sarah's story is hugely heroic and powerful. She is a definition of a strong parent. But a strong parent needs guidance too. A large number of her decisions were based on what she could see, hear and feel with her son now. But what if we helped her to learn to identify what pains her son may go in the future?

Most of the time, parents bring up their kids through trial and error. But successful parents are able to attend to their children's needs later as well as today. They plan ahead and anticipate situations. They are prepared for all obstacles that are thrown at their children. They truly set their children up to master the GAME OF LIFE.

Most parents prepare their children for the future by making sure they get a good education, get high grades and find a good job. The challenge is traditional education is mainly set up for the industrial economy. It is designed to build and produce workers. Today we will live in an idea economy. One idea can literally change the world. Parents who genuinely plan for their child's success understand that majority of the world's wealth is created through business. They understand that in order for their children to be a step ahead they need a positive mindset as well as a good education. They need to be able to give jobs rather than get jobs. They need to practice situation handling.

Sarah was able to see the pain of her son when he was picked last. In that moment, she created a plan to make sure that he gains advantage. The challenge is she could not see the pain and frustration in 12 years when he is 20 years old.

Instead of mastering the game of football, most of us do not master the game of life because most parents leave the future of their children in the hands of those who only produce workers. If we knew differently, we would know that there is a better way than living paycheck to paycheck. A lot of parents feel that a good education will get your children far but in reality if we expose children to business, money management and mindset as well as education, it would create true success.

When did successful people start?

Here are examples of successful people who started learning at a young age.

The world's best investor, Warren Buffett learnt about investing at the age of 7. He event started selling gum to his neighbours. Richard Branson started his career selling wooden tissue boxes and waste paper bins. When he grew into his teens, he started a record business. His mother was an entrepreneur herself and taught her everything he needed to know about business. Whether she realised it or not, she taught him the exact tools needed to master the game of life.

Because they were exposed to this at an early age they had an edge over their friends. Even though some were school dropouts like Richard Branson, they learnt skills that are hugely priceless and no traditional education system can teach. They were prepared through mindset, through situation handling and learning to create successful businesses.

The challenge is how can a parent who does not have entrepreneurial knowledge help their kids prepare for the future in terms of business? Most parents like you are already working hard with work and do not have time or knowledge to teach your kids about entrepreneurship. The key is learning from people who have already mastered this aspect.

Before going deeper into this, here is a fact that may surprise you. In the UK, the average age for men to start a business is 47 and for women it is 48. Most of us dream of having a business and being our own boss but we are afraid to take the leap. We live through life dreaming of having a business and finally in our late 40's we take action.

The question is why is this the case? The answer is simply because we are not taught these hugely important principles at a young age.

There is no doubt that parents have the best of intentions for children. But if intentions were enough, every kid would be successful and have an easier life. Every kid would have financial freedom. Every kid would be able to provide for their family and their loved ones at will. But intention without a plan is like a plane without fuel. It is not going to take you very far.

The story of Minh

Minh's story is a remarkable example of planning and preparing your child for the future. She came to the UK from Vietnam without any education. All she knew was how to clean homes. She had one 12 year old daughter who was the prize of her life. All she wanted was the best for her. Her daughter would attend a normal state school. Her dream was sending her to private school but she could not afford it. She could not even afford private tuition or sending her to sports clubs. She wanted her to do amazing in life even with these limitations. She certainly did not want her to be a cleaner.

While cleaning a home, she overheard the owner telling someone that "you need to have a plan in life to succeed." A few days later she heard the exact same thing from someone else. She realised that this must be a sign and she must find a way of creating a plan for her daughter. The problem is she had no idea of how to create one, Her lack of knowledge and education would be a huge hindrance. She would think about this all the time. She would even lose sleep over this.

Finally a light bulb went off a year later. An idea finally came into her mind.. To help her daughter, she would use her cleaning skills. She would clean in particular successful people's homes. These people would not be lawyers, doctors or politicians. Instead, they would be business people. If she could learn from them, her daughter would never even have to think of cleaning homes.

She would go to homes of many successful entrepreneurs and offer her services of cleaning. Many refused. That is until one family agreed to have her work at their home. It was a family that had a 12 year old son and a 9 year old daughter. She would work very hard at the home, cleaning way over hours. She would work with a huge smile on her face because she knew this was the key to her daughter's success. Soon, the family were very impressed by her efforts and attitude. They started to see her as their own.

Minh would pick up on the interactions kids would have with their parents. These parents owed multimillion dollar businesses. What they were teaching their kids was gold. They would teach them life changing information. For example, how to deal with situations at work and how to always have belief in yourself. They would also train their kids on growing their money and managing their wealth. Minh saw this as an opportunity to teach her daughter to also grow her savings. They would teach their kids about how to gain advantage in life and in business.

Everything Minh learnt she would take it back home and teach her daughter. She could start seeing the difference in her. She would even start seeing her savings grow. Her daughter started to grow in a lot of confidence.

Minh recalled one time which made a key difference to her. It was dinner time and the family allowed her to sit with them and eat. While having a conversation for dinner she heard the mother say to the daughter, "I never want you to work for anyone." This stunned Minh. How can someone not work for anyone? How will they make money? The more she thought about it the more it made sense to her. This is how people are successful! They work for themselves. This one statement cleared her vision. She could not wait to go home and say this to her parents!

When she came back home she told the exact same thing to her daughter. Her daughter asked, "but mum if you don't work for anyone how will I make money?" Minh turned and said, "you have to have a plan." It all came back full circle. Minh herself realised that it was because of planning that she found this hugely successful family. And through planning she will help her daughter become super successful.

Another year went by and because of their planning, Minh's daughter started a small business selling pencil cases. The family that Minh worked for found out about this and decided to invite her daughter over. They stated that because Minh is like family, her daughter is also family. She should be staying at their home and learning all she knows about business. A huge miracle for Minh. She was so grateful that her daughter now had a family of positive inspiring entrepreneurs that can teach her and guide her everyday. She will never have to worry about her daughter working for anyone else again.

The importance of planning

"If you fail to plan you plan to fail" Alan Lakain

The story of Minh shows that no matter where you are, if you have a strong plan for the future and take action, you can become hugely successful. Sarah planned for now and Minh planned for later. Any parent who is able to make sure their kids are getting the tools, wisdom and know how to build a positive mindset and business skills has a clear advantage over those who don't.

The question is, do you have a clear plan for your child to tackle the game of life? The future of your kids depends on what you did not do in life. Kids who learn about mindset, business and situation handling have a clear advantage. Kids who develop a strong mindset are 20% more likely to succeed in education than those who don't. 78% of adults interested in business wished they started learning these skills at young age. It is vital we as adults do not let our children wish the same thing. That we make sure they plan ahead for success.

You might be wondering that this is all useful information but what if you are a parent who is struggling to really make a difference to your child? Where do you go? The answer is you have 2 choices. You can find the time and discover it all yourself or you can join hundreds of parents who are already providing their kids with the edge to prepare them for the game of life!
